A Note From the Compiler

Indexing is far more subjective than you may think, and this index is a compendium of the subjective judgments of different colleagues over the 15 years that The Philatelic Exhibitor has been educating us. This, then, is a plea for patience and imagination on the part of users, especially in the matter of cross-indexing. While I have tried to make this as helpful as possible, I have had to leave some of the work to you when it comes to synonyms and near-synonyms. For example, a searcher interested in "topicals" had better check "thematics," too. Similarly for other combinations: Novice, Beginner and Youth, or Importance and Difficulty, or Synopses and Title Pages.

Because of the intense focus of TPE on one subject -- exhibiting -- and the fact that letters to the editor especially touched on more than one facet, the surest way to find an item that a user has in mind is probably through the author index. So if you know that John M. Collector wrote a piece on topical writeups, best look under C in the author index. (Of course if the writer was John M. Hotchner, or any other of several prolific authors, you had best try the subject index.)

This index is probably not going to be reissued as such, but it could be expanded and updated every five or ten years. So comments are welcome, with the hope that we can start a file on "Improving the Cumulative Index" and incorporate colleagues' suggestions.
